

What is monkey performance?

The Japanese have believed that "the monkey is an animal that possesses special powers" since ancient times.

It is said that they could treat ailments of horses and also help in training horses. Monkeys are supernatural beings that protect horses.

The samurai would use monkeys to ward off evil spirits away from horse stables. There are also records of a tradition of monkeys dancing in front of horse stables.

History of performance

During the Edo period (1603~1898), there were many castle towns strewn throughout all of Japan. There are records of the horse that leysu Tokugawa rode when travelling inside the city of Edo..

The monkey dance ceremony was a ritual planned to pray for a horse to heal. Then, after the ceremony, the horse really became better.

Nikko Saru Gundan (Monkey Troupe) Theater

SARU Gundan Theater (Main stage)

180 degree panoramic projection mapping

Nikko Saru Gundan is the only place you can watch a stage show like this of Nihon-zaru (Japanese Macaques). More than 10 million people have enjoyed the show since opening the theater (according to our statistics).

This is the main OSARU Land stage, where various acts are performed on stage and where spectacular drama is presented. At times, the action on stage is dynamic, at other times it can be comical, as the monkeys perform on the cozy stage for performers and the audience to be joined together in the excitement of the show.
